The European School of Haematology (ESH) is proud to announce the 2nd John Goldman Award.

The recipient of this annual award will receive a total of 80K€ to finance or co-finance a research project on TREATMENT FREE REMISSION (TFR). The research project start date will be November 1st 2020 and will have a maximum duration of two years.

The Research Project must:

- aim to develop a method, algorithm or test to reliably identify patients able to benefit from treatment discontinuation, thereby significantly improving the probability of TFR success;
- demonstrate potential, based on solid scientific evidence, to improve healthcare standards for Chronic Myeloid Leukaemia (CML) patients or for patients suffering from other hematological malignancies.
ESH is a not for profit association registered under the French law and with headquarters at the University Haematology Institute at Saint-Louis Hospital, Paris.

ESH provides a diverse portfolio of leading-edge scientific, translational research and clinically oriented meetings at which expert international faculties actively inform, mentor and interact face to face with trainees and practicing biologists and clinicians from across the world.
